The Institution is the professional arm of the Department of State for Tourism and Culture and executes its mandate through three technical divisions, namely, The Research and Documentation Division, The Museums and Monuments Division and The Creative and Performing Arts Division.

The Government of the Gambia considers that Tourism and Culture inextricably linked, one to the other, and that there are inalienable linkages in the vision for development.

Further, it recognises that arts and cultural activity make an essential contribution to the science of preservation and conservation and thus to quality of life in all communities offering enjoyment, empowerment and personal development through creative experience. They have an important role in the education of our children, in lifelong learning, in social inclusion, poverty alleviation and economic development.

The cultural diversity of our people is a major national asset and one that is enshrined in the Vision and subsequent protocols for the Gambian Tourism Authority.

The Secretariat of State of Tourism and Culture will support an arts and culture programme, which will provide access to all, both local communities, regional countries and international visitors, and draw on the capacities of young and old in all communities to give creative expression to the diversity of our heritage and the promise of the future.

The Vision of the Government of the Gambia and thus the NCAC, is to integrate the country's national cultural assets into the essential fabric of governing the country and to integrate cultural heritage into its Development Planning for the economic well being of its people in the long term.

The long-term vision of the National Centre for Arts and Culture is to provide the primary stimulus at National and local Government level for the orderly and professional development of a vibrant, integrated and sustainable cultural sector for the scientific, socio-cultural and economic benefit of the people of The Gambia.

C.2 Le Sommet du film africain a adopté la "Déclaration de Tshwane (Pretoria) »

Du 3 au 6 avril 2006, s'est tenu à Tshwane, le Sommet du Film Africain (The African Film Summit), organisé par le Département des Arts et de la Culture sud-africain et la National Film and Video Foundation (NFVF), en association avec la Fédération Panafricaine des Cinéastes (FEPACI).

Quelque 250 professionnels du cinéma africain réunis en Afrique du Sud ont adopté une politique commune destinée à encourager la production et la diffusion de films sur le continent.

La principale décision a été l'adoption de la Déclaration pan-africaine des professionnels du cinéma et de l'audiovisuel. Cette Déclaration, longue de six pages, prévoit la création d'une Commission panafricaine du cinéma, rattachée à l'Union africaine (UA) et chargée de créer un environnement pour développer l'industrie audiovisuelle africaine sur le plan interne et international. La commission devra aussi développer l'autofinancement du secteur.

Le sommet s'est tenu à huis clos du 3 au 5 avril à Pretoria. Il a été suivi jeudi du 7ème Congrès de la Fédération panafricaine du cinéma (Fepaci), créée à la fin des années 60.

Les professionnels du cinéma, venus de 39 pays, ont convenu de changer la structure de la Fepaci en la dotant d'un nouveau bureau et, pour la première fois, d'un président. Le secrétariat général siègera pour les quatre ans à venir à Johannesburg, avec l'élection de la productrice sud-africaine Seipati Bulane-Hopa, première femme nommée à ce poste. Elle succède au Béninois Jacques Behanzin. Le nouveau président est Charles Mensah, directeur du Centre gabonais du cinéma et producteur.

African Film Summit

The gathering was convened after two years of hard work and a request from filmmakers at Africa's biggest film festival, Fespaco, in Ouagadougou in 2003. It is an initiative of the Department of Arts and Culture, the National Film and Video Foundation, in association with the Pan African Federation of Filmmakers.

The summit ended with the adoption of the Tshwane declaration calling for the establishment of an African Audiovisual and Cinema Commission as well as a fund to promote the cinema industry and television in Africa. This call for the establishment of an African Audiovisual and Cinema Commission (AACC) follows a decision taken by the African Union in 2003.

It is anticipated that the establishment of the commission will change this pattern of dependency on foreign financing of African films. The involvement of African governments in promoting policies for the development of cultural industries in their respective countries will go a long way towards providing the necessary institutional setting for the establishment of the commission. This commission should be established as a specialised agency of the AU, which brings with it the financial and institutional support of the AU. The future shape, role and functioning of the commission would be determined by resolutions taken at the summit.

The challenge is to create a different alignment between culture, politics and the public. In practice this will require courage, confidence and radicalism on the part of professionals in finding new ways to build greater legitimacy directly with citizens. The evidence suggests that such an approach would be successful and would serve the aims of all concerned – politicians, the professionals themselves, and above all, the public.
