In Memoriam of Angeline Kamba

The disappearance of Mrs. Angeline Kamba on the night of September 11, after more than a decade of that of her dear husband, Professor Kamba, former Rector of the University of Zimbabwe, leaves a vacuum that it will be difficult to fill.

Among the various functions which the Providence had granted her to occupy can be mentioned: Director of the National Archives, Member of the UNESCO International Commission for Culture and Development, Chairperson of the Board of Directors of the International Festival of Arts Harare (HIFA) and Member of the Steering Committee of the Observatory of Cultural Policies in Africa.

Among the numerous and prestigious missions entrusted to her to carry the message of the emerging OCPA figure: in Dakar, at the first conference of intellectuals of the African Union; in Johannesburg, in the Witwatersrand University for a public reading on the need to study the role of cultural policy in Africa's development; in Mutare, at the Africa University where she and her fellow members of the structures of our Organization participated in the animation of the opening of the academic year in the Institute for Peace, Leadership and Governance; and in Maputo, where she represented the Chair of the OCPA Board of Trustees and delivered the opening address of the First Euro-African Campus of Cultural Cooperation in collaboration with Interarts.

But above all it is a great lady of the heart who goes away, a brilliant spirit, who honors her gender, who disappears precisely at a time when we needed her sense of discernment, the measure of her openness and of the relevance of her vision of the future, all qualities that her close friend Lourdes Arizpe, former UNESCO Assistant Director-General for Culture, considered as historical elements of our foundations.

In giving her this homage, we would like at the same time to formulate a fervent prayer so that her example and her memory remain a reference for young men and women acting in the field of culture, in search of landmarks and embarked in the quest for a sustainable and all round development for themselves and their relatives as well as for a world thus assured, as to its foundations, of the benefits of relevant and integral policies.

A. News from OCPA

A.1 Tribute to Mrs Angeline Kamba

The month of September 2017 will remain marked in the history of the OCPA by the disappearance of Mrs. Angeline Kamba, Member of its Board of Directors which occurred on the night of 11 to 12 September following an illness that will have prevailed. A tribute was paid to the international conference celebrating the 60th anniversary of the National Gallery of Contemporary Art in Harare, which included the Executive Director of OCPA, Lupwishi Mbuyamba and Stephen Chifunyise, Focal Point for Zimbabwe and Chairman of the Technical Committee of the OCPA. The president of the council, Pierre Dandjinou, immediately informed of this sad news, sent, from September 12, his condolences moved to the family and relatives of the deceased.

A.2 Missions of Hamadou Mandé, Focal Point for Burkina Faso and Assistant Research Coordinator of OCPA

From 15 to 28 September, Hamadou Mande, Focal Point for Burkina Faso and Assistant Research Coordinator, carried out a field mission which took him successively to Morocco, Gabon, South Africa and Mozambique, the purpose of which was the technical visit of some high-performing cultural institutions with a view to preparing the legal framework for SICADIA (Summit of African Cultural Institutions and the Diaspora) for which OCPA is in charge of preparing for the 5th session foreseen in Yaoundé in October 2017.

Mr. Mande then joined the Executive Director of OCPA in Abidjan, Côte d'Ivoire, the new headquarters of ARTERIAL, where a technical meeting was held to validate the outcome of the working group on cultural policies.

A.3 Cooperation with Federico Escribal, professor and researcher on cultural rights and cultural policies at Tres de Febrero National University (Buenos Aires, Argentina)

The OCPA, continuing the extension of its scope, initiated cooperation with Federico Escribal, former Director of Diversity and Cultural Rights at the National Ministry of Culture of Argentina and presently professor and researcher on cultural rights and cultural policies at the National University Tres de Febrero and Collaborator of the Observatory of Cultural Policies of the great Cultural Center of Buenos Aires.

The occasion of this virtual meeting was the dissemination of the Charter of the Molaare communicated to the OCPA by its Focal Point in Mauritania, Professor Abdoulaye Sow of the University of Nouakchott.

A wider cooperation is thus envisaged in all the fields of culture in the region of Latin America where Argentina is a country that counts, which will undoubtedly consolidate the intercultural approach included in the process of OCPA. A forthcoming formal presentation of OCPA Network facilitators will give OCPANews readers more information about the personality of Federico Escribal.

B.5 International Film Festival in Abidjan to Emerge from the African "entre-soi"

Maurice Kouakou Bandaman, the Ivorian Minister of Culture and Francophonie, announced the creation of an International Film Festival in Abidjan.

This event, scheduled for November 2018, will not be expected to compete with FESPACO. European, American, Asian films will be programmed, and foreign professionals invited. The goal is not to let African cinema into a "squeezing" between-itself and, above all, to conquer new markets.

The event also aims to boost the Ivorian cinema, both in terms of production and broadcasting. A multiplex of five Gaumont theaters should see the light of day by 2019.

C. News about cultural policies, institutions and resources in Africa

C.1 Ethiopia: Call for Cultural Policy Media Popularization

The Ministry of Culture and Tourism called on the media to popularize the revised cultural policy aimed at nurturing the constitutionally-guaranteed equal recognition of cultures and languages of Ethiopia.

Cultural Industry Development and Cooperation Director Desta Kassa stated that the old policy had limitations in marketing cultural resources and putting in place viable system.

As the diverse cultures of Ethiopia are the foundations and sources of its economic, social and human resources, the Director indicated that the revised policy would play a pivotal role in enhancing commercialization of the cultural industry.

Therefore, he said the policy would be instrumental to the transformation of these resources to potential investments that can create employments and sustainable incomes for citizens.

For the effective implementation of the policy, the Ministry encourages public agencies to preserve the diverse cultures, languages and histories of the Nations, Nationalities and Peoples of Ethiopia, he added.

The policy would also create framework for empowering the people to further develop their values and cultures of peaceful co-existence, mutual respect as well as build national consensus thereby exploiting these for the country's renaissance, Desta elaborated.

C.4 Guinea: The Vision of Sanoussy Bantama Sow, New Minister of Culture and Sports

During the transfer of power at the head of the Ministry of Culture, Sports and Historical Heritage between Siaka Barry, outgoing minister and the new ministry, Sanoussi Bantama Sow, former minister adviser to the Presidency of the Republic, it was recalled that the culture, sports and historical heritage sector occupies a prominent place in the programme of the Prime Minister which stresses the priority of

- the rehabilitation of the country's cultural heritage;
- the mobilization of Guinean artists for peace.

Siaka Barry, the outgoing minister said that the main results achieved under his leadership are

- the adoption of the draft law on the preservation of the national cultural heritage;
- the drafting of the copyright law under study in the National Assembly;
- the start of restoration work on the national mausoleum of Camayenne.

As head of the department, the incoming minister, for his part, believes that the path set out by the President of the Republic and the Government of the Republic requires good planning and a diversification strategy linked to training and capacity building officials of the said Ministry.

He took the opportunity to extend a frank hand to the artists from outside that he considers to be ambassadors of Guinea to promote the culture and the historical heritage.

At the head of this department, the new minister intends to focus on priority cultural

- the creation of "Palace of Culture"; at national, regional level;
- the launching of the national literary competition (Grand Prize of the President);
- the establishment of the special status of artists and the promotion of historical heritage.

D.1 Report "Promoting access to culture via digital means"

The European Commission's Directorate-General for Education, Youth, Sports and Culture recently published the study "Promoting access to culture via digital means. Policies and strategies for audience development". The report stresses the need for change in institutions and arts organisations, both public and private, to bring them more in line with the impact of digitisation and the internet. This is the only way they will be able to reach their audiences. The report also points out the benefits of new technologies to the cultural sector and explores possible reasons why it is lagging behind.

East African Cultural, Arts Fete Kicks off in Kampala

The third edition of the East African Community (EAC) arts and culture festival kicked off officially in Kampala on 10 September. Dubbed Jumuiya ya Afrika Mashariki Utamaduni Festival (Jamafest), the fete is aimed at promoting regional socio-cultural integration. In the opening ceremony Ugandan Prime Minister Ruhakana Rugunda urged the use of arts to enhance unity and for job creation especially since more than 60 per cent of the EAC population is made up of youth. The events include musical performances, theatre, literary works, poetry and storytelling, among others. The Festival is held every two years in one of the EAC member states on a rotational basis. The 2013 and 2015 editions were hosted by Rwanda and Kenya respectively. <http://allafrica.com/stories/201709120725.html>

The 7th art in the Comoros Union

To speak of cinema in the Comoros sometimes comes to dissert in an unnamed desert. Not that the images do not circulate in numbers - the net, the TV and the DVD make their nest there a long time - but the cinema as a practice of cultural expression is especially part of the new arts. The cinema remains a new expression in this island landscape. The CIFF, of course, is helping to build a new report on the 7th screen in the country. But it will take time for the screen to resume alive in the neighborhoods. <http://africultures.com/7eme-art-lunion-comores/>

Cologne Film Festival of Africa

Since 1992, FilmInitiativ has presented more than 750 films from 40 countries in Africa to Cologne and invited 170 directors for discussions with the public (all in a three-language database on the website www.filme-aus-afrika.de). This African Film Festival is the biggest event devoted to contemporary African cinema in Germany. At its 2017 edition (September 21 - October 1, 2017), 80 new films will be presented, including the winners of FESPACO 2017 and the 2016 Carthage Film Days (Tunisia). <http://africultures.com/evenements/?no=47812>

FIFDA 2017: Reversing the Gaze and Restoring History - Olivier Barlet

Organized by Artmattan, a distributor based in New York, and returning to Paris each September, the International Festival of Films of the African Diaspora (FIFDA) affirms its objective, in line with its North American anchorage: to share cinematographic looks on the lives of Africans or Afro-descendants around the world and enrich the resulting dialogue between all concerned whatever their culture. As usual, FIFDA offers, for its 7th edition from 8 to 10 September, unpublished or little-known films, occasion of fruitful discoveries. ### Artwatch Africa Response Training, East and West Africa

In August 2017, the first two regional “Artwatch Africa Response” training workshops for East African and West African lawyers took place in Nairobi (2 - 4 August 2017, GoDown Arts Centre) and Lagos (8 - 10 August 2017, Freedom Park). The workshops were organised within the framework of the Artwatch Africa project in order to improve the legal and judicial protection of artists in Africa, and were led by Oludayo Fagbemi from the Institute for Human Rights and Development in Africa. The participants looked at enforcement mechanisms for artists rights. The participants used role play in order to practically demonstrate the lessons learned. ## F.5 Alger Culture: Action culturelle

Algerian Cultural Sector Investor’s Guide — Arabic Edition

After a drastic reduction in the culture budget in 2016, the Algerian authorities have recognized the importance of private investment in boosting the cultural sector, which can be a driving force for economic development for the country, stimulating growth and by creating sustainable jobs. The Guide to investing in the cultural sector in Algeria is therefore timely: it is a necessary instrument to accompany private investors in setting up their projects. Prepared by Ammar Kessab, the Guide presents the different regimes for private investment in the culture sector, as well as specific provisions and tax advantages. The Guide will be updated annually. Read the Guide at <http://gtpca.org/wp-content/uploads/Guide-of-investor-in-the-sector-culture-en-Agency.pdf>

Taxing cross-border e-commerce and making GAFA contribute to local cultural production and production: a complex equation?

In this issue of September, the newsletter explores the complex relationships between taxation and e-commerce by proposing an analysis that puts into perspective the possibility of taxing online purchases and sales of cultural goods and services on platforms such as Netflix and Amazon for the purpose of financing the creation and local cultural production. The issue also highlights the "Manifesto for the Sustainability and Outreach of National Culture and Media in the Digital Age", a document that mobilized close to 40 signatory groups representing different sectors of the cultural industries, the media and of content in Quebec and Canada. In addition, we announce in this issue the holding of the first edition of the Forum on Internet Governance in Quebec.
