C.4 Bayelsa Council for Arts & Culture (Nigeria)

The creation of Bayelsa State on October 1, 1996, marked the beginning of the Bayelsa State Council for Arts & Culture. The services of thirty-seven (37) members of staff of Bayelsa State origin in the old Rivers State Council for Arts & Culture transferred to the newly created state with effect from October 6, 1996. They had no alternative than to move over to Yenagoa, the new state capital that was then a virgin land completely.

The Bayelsa State Council for Arts & Culture is a parastatal under the Bayelsa State Ministry of Information, Culture & Tourism. It came into existence officially with the signing into law of the Edict establishing it on May 4, 1998, by the then Military Administrator of the State, Navy Capt. Omoniyi Caleb Olubolade. The Council is responsible for preserving, promoting and fostering the appreciation, revival and development of the Arts and Culture of the State among other functions.

As the custodian of the Arts and Culture of the State, and as the organ that is flying the flagship of culture in the state, the Council has the vision of putting Bayelsa State on the national and international cultural agenda in the new millennium.

D.6 Foundations of Adult Education in Africa (African Perspectives on Adult Learning series)

This book presents key concepts, information and principles that should underlie the practice of adult education in African contexts. It assumes that adult educators should have a historical perspective on the current educational context, understand how the colonial experience has impacted on indigenous traditions and be aware of the philosophical underpinnings of adult education activities. The chapters introduce the foundations and history of adult education in Africa; philosophy and adult education; socio-cultural, political and economic environments; opportunities and access for adult learners; gender and development in adult education; adult education as a developing profession; information and communication technology; globalization and adult education; and policies and structures of lifelong learning.

Who's who in cultural policy? International database in development

Thursday, December 08, 2005

IFACCA has teamed up with the Boekman Foundation of the Netherlands to develop ConnectCP, an online international database of cultural policy experts. It will help organisers find world class speakers for conferences and seminars, research partners or analysts and commentators on a diversity of issues. To be considered an 'expert' the full criteria are described here: <http://www.connectcp.org/profiles/criteria.htm>. For more details go to www.ConnectCP.org.

Arts Research Topics

IFACCA's website contains a wealth of research information on arts policy topics as broad as: funding, dance, indicators, disability, artist mobility and copyright. And there are always new reports underway. For the full list, visit the IFACCA website: www.ifacca.org These topics are part of our D'Art program, which aims to consolidate our collective knowledge on contemporary issues in arts support, and to uncover information that would be difficult or impossible to find.

Topics for which we have completed reports:

- Defining artists for tax and benefit purposes
- International comparisons of arts participation data
- National Copyright Management Systems
- Conflict of Interest Policies in Arts and Culture Funding Agencies
- Musical Instrument Schemes
- Arts and Disability Policies
- Successful Dance Policies and Programs
- Artists' International Mobility Programs

- Statistical Indicators for Arts Policy (and Making Cross-country Comparisons of Cultural Statistics: Problems and Solutions)
- Assistance to Arts and Culture Festivals

Multilingualism in Cyberspace Will Assure a More Just and Equitable Information Society

<http://topics.developmentgateway.org/culture>

An increasing digital divide between North and South is exacerbating the differences in access to the Internet and to information in general, and thereby increasing the income and wealth gap between rich and poor. This will also affect minority cultures in a negative way, given that 10 or so languages are dominant on the evermore-important Internet. According to UNESCO, only 10 percent of the world's 6,000 languages are represented on the Internet.

International Flows of Selected Cultural Goods and Services, 1994-2003

This new report, released during the 2005 WTO meeting in Hong Kong, tracks the international flow of cultural goods and services for a nine-year period. Compiled by the UN Bureau of Statistics and released by UNESCO, the report recounts the increasingly important role of cultural products in international trade, but identifies less than 4% coming from the developing world. According to the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD, 2005), the global market value of industries with strong creative and cultural components is estimated at US$ 1.3 trillion. Since 2000, the industry has grown at an annual compound rate of over 7%. Cultural and creative industries have also taken up a key position in the countries of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD), with an annual growth rate of between 5% and 20%, as well as in a number of leading developing countries and countries in transition (UNCTAD, 2004). Globally, these industries are estimated to account for more than 7% of the world's Gross Domestic Product (World Bank, 2003) and are forecast to grow roughly at the same pace over the next three years reaching US$ 1.7 trillion (PWC, 2005).

Sweden's Work with Culture and Media

http://www.dac-evaluations-cad.org/dac/abstracts_e.htm

Sweden was one of the first countries to give culture a special position in governmental development co-operation. The latest formalised position on approaches, objectives and priorities in this area is the Policy for Sida's International Development Co-operation in the Field of Culture which was adopted in the year 2000. Since then, an estimated MSEK 900 have been disbursed to culture and media efforts in 20 countries. Media projects account for around two-fifths of this support. The rest has been disbursed to projects in the areas of performing arts, cultural heritage, literature, and visual arts. In the light of a stronger poverty focus in development co-operation both internationally and in Sweden, Sida has recognised a need to consider the role of culture and media in development, and revise the present policy. The 2005 evaluation of this support is posted on the DAC Evaluation website. Hit 'Submit' with no other changes, and scroll down to SIDA10079.

African Languages in Cyberspace: UNESCO Continues Support for N'ko Project

<http://topics.developmentgateway.org/culture/rc/BrowseContent.do>

UNESCO continues its support for a project enabling African languages written in N'ko, an alphabet developed in 1949, to be present in cyberspace through the development of fonts for the N'ko script and their use in hard and software. Carried out in partnership with the Scripts Encoding Initiative of the University of California at Berkeley, the present project phase aims at facilitating the presence of languages based in N'ko scripts in the digital world through the availability of N'ko-compatible software and hardware and appropriate standards. An earlier project phase consisted in the development of a Unicode standard for N'ko to the international character encoding standards. Once completed the current phase of the project, it will be possible to accurately describe the African languages and their dialects in Internet.
